

What's the point?
By: Priscilla and Jennifer Nornoo

I walk, I talk, I move around like everyone else
But because I'm different I'm an outsider
I sit, I stand, and I jump around like everyone else
But because I'm different I'm an outsider
All because I have a label
The label of people pre-judging me
So what if I have a different racial background
So what if I have different a religious belief
So what if I live in a different community that may be worse or better than yours
At the end of the day you know what's funny?
You're judging me based on my identity and the thing is
You have an identity too
You judge me based on what's outside but not the inside
I walk by and I'm already labeled
Why do we have to have labels?
Why do we have to be judged based on racial background, religious belief, and community?
Why?
Because last time I checked
We all have an identity
We all have a background
So why can't we come together as one?
After all that is the connection we all have towards each other
Why Prejudice?
Do you even know what that is means.
Prejudice is preconceived opinion that is not based on reason or actual experience
Why Hate?
Hate is the intense or passionate dislike of a people or group
So why did it start?
Why is this happening?
So what if I'm different, you're different too.
So what if you have a new pair of Jordan and the newest gadgets that just came out
It's doesn't means you the finest cup of gold in the world.
Why do you want to judge, why do you want to hate?
Why don't you do yourself a favor and Reevaluate.
